Intercampus Tuition Benefit Pilot Program FAQs

Can my dependent use my benefit on any CU campus?	Yes. Beginning in Fall 2017, the Intercampus Tuition Benefit Pilot Program allows dependents of University of Colorado employees to attend any of CU's campuses. It will run for three academic years.
Who is considered a dependent?	Qualified dependents include spouses, children under age 27 as well as disabled children over the age of 27.
How many credits can my dependent use in a year?	If using Option A - Home Campus, your dependent will receive a 30 percent discount on tuition. If using Option B - Other Campus, you will receive a $270 discount per credit hour, up to a maximum of 9 credits, to apply toward the cost of tuition. If you and your spouse both work on a CU campus, you can both give your dependent your tuition benefit for the academic year, effectively doubling it.
Can my dependent and I both use credits in a single academic year?	No. Either you or your dependent can use the benefit; it cannot be shared.
What types of classes can my dependent take?	If using Option A - Home Campus, your dependent can take undergraduate or graduate courses. If using Option B - Other Campus, they can take undergraduate, non-extended studies, credit-bearing courses.
When can my dependent register?	Dependents can register for courses during the standard registration period. Employees must wait to register until the first day of class.
How do I use the benefit?	Instructions and deadline for each campus can be found on the Employee Services website. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • CU Boulder: www.cu.edu/employee-services/tuition-benefit-cu-boulder • CU Denver/Anschutz: www.cu.edu/employee-services/tuition-benefit-cu-denver • UCCS: www.cu.edu/employee-services/tuition-benefit-uccs
